

ECOLE INTERNATIONALE
DE SANTÉ PUBLIQUE
UM6SS - CASABLANCA

The purpose of this work is to review the literature on nursing responsibility and relate it to the experience of continuing education developed within a hospital case.

The study started with the training, consisting of two parts (legal and ethical responsibility), as well as a close follow-up of the participants by sending them questionnaires related to the content of the training and identification sheets. . This follow-up enabled us to ensure the effective participation of nurses in training.

Follow-up continued with a bibliographic search on the subject and then by the collection of the questionnaires completed by the participants and the analysis of the relevance of the answers. Interviews were also conducted.

The result of the literature review and the interviews will allow us to answer our research question to ascertain to what extent this will meet the needs of the nurses and the needs of the hospital.

Key words: Evaluation, continuing education, Cheikh Khalifa Hospital, Literature Review, legal-responsibility...ethics.
